City of Pompano Beach Launches Webcasting Technology

Pompano Beach residents will now be able to watch City Commission Meetings broadcast live on the Internet. Users can also instantly replay all or part of those meetings at their convenience through a link on the City's web site www.mypompanobeach.org and click on the link titled "Pompano Beach Web Streaming". Links will be placed on the Home Page, Commission Page, Resident Page and Meetings Page. Once on the web streaming page, the video player window will include the Commission Meeting Agenda with direct links to access specific agenda item discussions within the archived meeting. Meetings will be archived and available for viewing for one year. In addition, there is a search feature where you can enter key words on any topic to view that item.

The city will officially launch the new webcasting technology on January 12th by web streaming its first live City Commission Meeting, enhancing the accessibility of local programming to citizens who may not have access to Comcast Cable service, but do have a broadband Internet connection.

"The City of Pompano Beach has made open government a priority by listening to the residents and implementing a state of the art solution to support enhanced access to City Commission Meetings", said Mayor Lamar Fisher. "We are excited to be able to offer a diverse number of options for our residents to become more informed and engaged with local government and the related issues that affect our city."

The new on-line service is powered by Granicus, Inc., the premier provider of government webcasting and public meeting management solutions to over 500 government agencies.
